

Summary report of rejection email analysis

Davide Chiuchiu

August 28, 2020

1 Scope

This document contains my findings on the corpus of emails that I received during my job search. The email database contains

- the emails that confirmed the application submission
- the emails where companies showed interest in pursuing further my candidacy
- the emails where companies rejected my candidacy.

2 Companies tends to be very concise when they interact with applicants.

The first thing I notice from my analysis is that companies tends to be very concise when they interact with applicants. Overall the email I have received during my job search are quite short (see Figure 1). Their majority s has less than 10 sentences, with 4-7 sentences as the most common length.

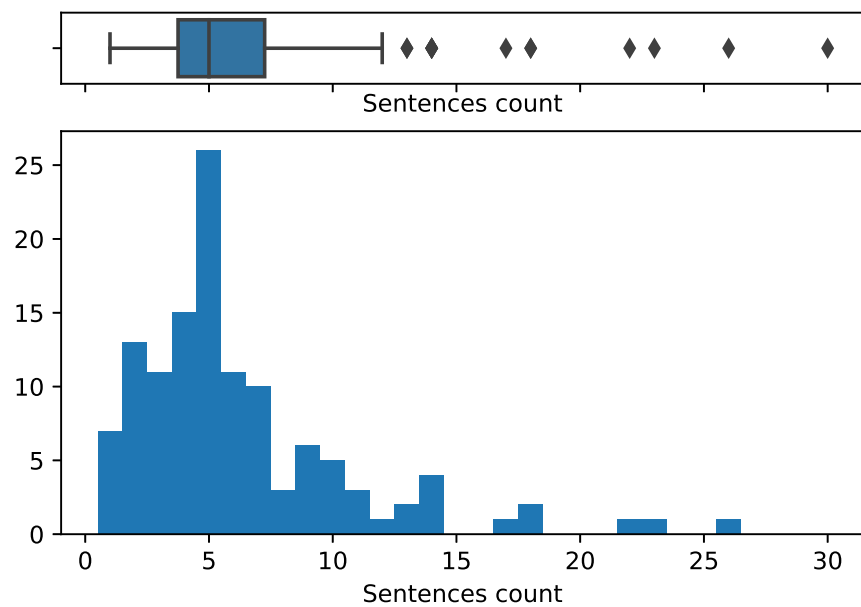

Figure 1: Companies tends to be very concise when they interact with applicants. Emails from companies rarely have more than 10 sentences.